Getting a decent commission from your affiliate programs is very important. You are spending your hard earned money and time on sending warm ready to buy traffic to your sponsor's site and getting him sales so it stands to reason that you do not want to be working for pennies. Here are some points to check: Percentage of commission: One of the first things you should check in regards to commissions is the percentage of sales they are offering. Try to go for 20% and above. Even for a high end product 10% is not worth it. Remember you have to put up the money for advertising and marketing. Your costs need to be covered and allow you to be in profit. Residual income: Try to get some affiliate programs that pay a good commission monthly. These will be programs like autoresponders, membership sites. Recurring sales like vitamins and health products that customers will order again and again are also good sources of residual income. 2-tiered programs: Try to join 2-tiered programs you will earn passive income from your sub affiliates. Of course do not rely on these as the percentage will be quite small, but try to build up a number of sub affiliates to supplement your income. Good sales copy and sales page that converts well: It is no good sending warm, ready to buy traffic to your sponsor if they do not have a good sales page. It is just a waste of time and money. If you would not be persuaded to buy from the sales page there is every reason to believe that others will feel the same way. Make sure the product is good: There is no point promoting substandard products and services. This will also harm your credibility. When you apply these points you can make money and increase profits with your affiliate programs.
